

Robert Pokorski, MD

Vice President & Medical Director
Global Communications
Prudential Financial, Inc.

Dr. Robert Pokorski is a vice president and medical director at Prudential Financial, Inc. Dr. Pokorski helps financial advisors, their clients, and consumers better understand the health issues they need to consider when preparing for their retirement years.

Dr. Pokorski is an internationally renowned lecturer and author. He has traveled the country giving presentations on health-related topics such as the non-financial shocks that can threaten retirement security. These shocks include being forced to retire early, high out-of-pocket medical expenses later in life, chronic illness care, widowhood, and living longer than expected.

Dr. Pokorski is certified by the Board of Insurance Medicine and American Board of Internal Medicine, and is a fellow of the American College of Physicians. He holds an MBA from Heriot-Watt University in Edinburgh, Scotland, and a Doctor of Medicine from Creighton University School of Medicine in Omaha, Nebraska.

He has published more than 150 articles in such prestigious publications as Nature, Cancer, The American Journal of Human Genetics, and the Journal of Financial Service Professionals. Dr. Pokorski, who is an expert on longevity, has delivered more than 1,000 presentations to audiences worldwide. He has also served on the editorial boards of the North American Actuarial Journal and the Journal of Insurance Medicine.

Prior to joining The Prudential Insurance Company of America, Dr. Pokorski worked for The Hartford, where he was the first Chief Medical Strategist in the company's 200-year history.
